David Do is the senior director of iBlinks Pty Ltd with an in-depth knowledge of the mortgage and financial planning industry; he has been involved in business and financial services for almost a decade.

After graduating with a degree in Health Science from the University of Adelaide, David served in the Australian Army Reserves as a medic where he observed the importance of structure, discipline, and the preciousness of life. Already involved with the finance industry during this time he saw a desperate need to educate his clients to consider their long term life goals and not just the goal of paying off their mortgage.

As an experienced mortgage broker and financial planner, David currently mentors individuals around Australia and is continually challenging the traditional mindsets when it comes to understanding finance. His solid, relevant approach and thorough understanding of the topic has allowed his message to be received clearly and warmly by those from different age groups and financial circumstances.
